

THE DEL MAR DAILY

APRIL EDITION
www.urbansunrises.com

ALL THE NEWS WORTH TO PRINT IN THE SOUTHERN REACHES

THE DEL MAR DAILY BARELY AVERTS DISASTER!

THE DEL MAR DAILY NEARLY MISSES ITS PRINT DEADLINE FOR THE FIRST TIME EVER!

By: Larke Wendt

In all its long history, The Del Mar Daily has prided itself on never missing an edition.

Quinder Sealbar, the founder of the Del Mar Daily, would have been rolling over in his grave just yesterday to think that the famed Del Mar Daily might not make it to print! But he's settled snug in his grave moss today as the talented and proficient staff beat all odds to get the news out!

Truthfully, it was a slow news cycle and the paper was looking quite dull, but the news must be circulated, even if it is a humdrum message. Dryan Knowbottom, Editor in Chief of the Daily Del Mar deserves all the credit for his rallying cry and approving the overtime we needed to get the edition to print.

He even brought in duffnauts and trickle rush bean brew to keep us fed and hydrated! The duffnauts were especially exquisite!

How did we get two paragraphs in without even telling you what happened? We really aren't certain and the details are still being argued about throughout the city. At exactly late morning, the sky went dark and a cloud appeared over The Del Mar Daily's downtown office. No rain was expected, so the windows were left open to enjoy the beautiful spring breeze off the White Depths.

When I tell you it rained, you would think me mad for underselling it so! The deluge we experienced had all of our copies of the April edition underwater! With only a few hours to go til the deadline we had no edition and no paper to print it on!!

I feel Editor Knowbottom will agree with this intrepid reporter for bestowing the true hero title to our gnomish printer, Pranfield. Turns out this is one loyal gnome. He's worked under the radar at The Del Mar Daily since anyone can remember. He had a crate of blank newspaper stashed in storage that we used to get this edition to you.

Pranfield had this to say, "I always have a stock of items on hand for just such an emergency! My pa and his pa before him were printers for The Del Mar Daily, and as they used to say, "The print must go on!"

So there you have it! Disaster semi-averted and the good reputation of your news outlet remains intact! Keep an eye out for an upcoming expose on the entire staff here at the Del Mar Daily where you'll get to know Pranfield the hero a little better!

The Windstone Chronicles
by Ryan and Melissa Duncan
EXPLORE the World of Windstone
A Dryad's Fate
a spring narrative adventure module

A NARRATIVE ADVENTURE MODULE

← FREE THIS MONTH FOR OUR FANS

DOWNLOAD